I am going to miss you my dear cousin. Though I have never met you in person, because of the miles apart, New Jersey and Memphis, it feels as though I knew you with your kind and gentle personality. You were the historian in the family. You brought the family closer together with your collection of pictures and notes about the family. You kept us abreast of everything. Going to miss you so much!

I am so grateful for the time that God has given us together. I know that we all are on borrowed time and can be called back at God's command. You have been the greatest gift and blessing to my family and myself as well. My heart is so heavy because I miss you so much already. How do you get past losing a best friend and soulmate. You were my light in the darkest of hours and you knew how to calm my stress in a way that no one else could. I have such a void without you here with me. No one will truly understand this heartache. While others are asleep, I will walk down memory lane. Through the sadness, I will remember the joy. When I'm alone physically, I will choose to keep you in my heart. Through the tears I will see your face. I love you in life as well as death. I refuse to say goodbye, but I will give a simple "See you later". Love Always, Debbie
